Happy New Year, Art Lovers!

What just happened? We have survived a very unusual 365 days. 2023 has been a series of escalating catastrophes.

As I collect our vast social media output from the year, I realize and very much appreciate the arts. What a wonderful world it is.

Joy and Appreciation!

Our lead film critic Justin Tanner reviews two films. Director Clay Tatum's funny and smart debut feature "The Civil Dead" manages to enchant, disturb, nail its fantasy elements, juggle abstraction and reality without sacrificing narrative sense. In M. Night Shyamalan's "Knock at the Cabin Door" no character, not even for a moment, sounds like anything resembling a human being.

Wife of the Master Mural Painter Gleefully Dabbles in Works of Art

By FLORENCE DAVIES.

SOMETHING about the hilarious incongruity of a stuffed lion, a plaster-of-Paris horse, and a colored chromo of George Washington draped in garlands of red, white and blue crepe paper, all jumbled in the same shop window, proved to be too much for the sense of humor of Senora Diego Rivera, and so she simply had to do something about it. What she did was to go home and paint it, which may surprise people who think that Diego Rivera, the great mural painter now at work at the Detroit Institute of Arts, is the only artist in the family. That, however, is all a mistake, since his wife, Carmen Rivera, or "Freda," as her friends call her, is a painter in her own right, though

The Shill to Power

One of the most prominent trends in contemporary discourse (sic) is one that insists on conflating fascism and communism. On the most basic level this is easy enough to understand, it's an easy and simplistic lumping together of ideologies the better not to consider what each means. Of course it is increasingly difficult to gauge, accurately, what contemporary discourse actually looks like. Social media, as I never tire of pointing out, is a massively distorted mirror on the world. That said, I have been returning to the topic of capitalism and its durability in the last couple posts. Perhaps because I sense this is a form of endgame, for neo liberalism, for the empire, for capitalism itself. And because of that I feel a need (and not just me) to unwrap the origins of capitalism and of colonialism, racialized thinking, and how technology factors into this story.

—Pune's Freshest Art Export

Meet Gotama Adani Ram, India's newest art export. Not since painter M.F. Husain's show in 1952 Zurich has the world witnessed such remarkable talent from an India-born-and-raised artist. Unlike his predecessors specializing in one or two forms of expression, Gar's "topographical assemblages" combine sculpture, painting and collage loosely organized around topography elements, all stemming from a mind not content with just one or three media.

JUSTIN TANNER REVIEW

GIRL: (re: cigarette) That will be the death of you.

BOY: No, The black lung will get me first.

GIRL: I see. You know best. (He puts a pinch of tobacco in his mouth.)

BOY: The number of vices is constant, for instance, you are a babbler.

GIRL: I'll think about that at your grave.

BOY: A sympathy card will do.

GIRL: That costs.
